The President versus the Will of the People.

toTuts is a republic where the will of the people is the law of the land," was the noble ntterance of the General of our armies, as he protested to the President against the removal of the gallant Sheridan. No expression could have more truly embodied the spirit of our institutions, and it is a most fortunate thing for the country at this conjuncture, that the great military chieftain of the age is a man whose every sympathy is with the people. How significant the contrast, too, when a great military commander, who might naturally be supposed to have imbibed something of the spirit of absolute rule, thus nobly pleads for the vital principle of the republic with the chief civil officer of the nation, who, sworn to defend the Constitution and the laws, attempts to set up his own mere will as superior to both! For, if any one thing has been apparent throughout Mr. Johnson's whole career, it has been his stubborn, dogged defiance of the will of the people. He has had a "policy" of his own, which he wished to see carried out. He has apparently thought himself wiser than the whole nation beside. He has attempted to arrogate to himself the settlement of the vast and difficult problems growing out of the war. He has assumed to be the State. In short, his whole course has been in direct opposition to the truthful and patriotic sentiment of General Grant, that this is a republic in which the will of the people is the law of the land.

Now, in such a contest as this, defeat and disgrace can but continue to wait on the steps of the President. He precipitates himself against one of the primal forces of the American political system, and he might as well attempt to wrestle with fate itself as to think of overcoming it. No matter though his "policy" were the perfection of wisdom' and the "consummate flower" of statesmanship, the result would be all the same; and for this simple reason, that the principle against which he is fighting is vastly more important than any question of mere policy which can originate in the Government under it. We might have a king, who would rule more wisely than any President or Congress that we have ever tried; but in that case we should cease to be a republic, and should have launched ourselves upon the unknown sea of despotic possibilities. When, therefore, Mr. Johnson tells us that his "policy" is the best, we reply that we don't care a fig for the character of his policy; that he has no business with any policy, good or bad, but that his simple duty is to faithfully and honestly execute the nation's policy as he finds it expressed in the nation's laws.

Mr. Johnson is in a false position-a position which the Constitution of our country and the spirit of our institutions do not allow any President to occupy. The American system has no place for an Executive seeking directly or indirectly to give to his will the force of law. The people elect their Representatives, those Representatives pass laws, those laws are the nation's policy; and any President who assumes to have a different policy, which he is endeavoring to force upon the country, becomes a "surper, and commits one of the highest of official crimes and misdemeanors. This is the position of Mr. Johnson, and General Grant did well to remind him of the great primal principle of our political system. If the President is not utterly given over to "hardness of heart and blindness of mind," he will hesitate before he pushes this contest to extremes. "This is a republic where the will of the people is the law of the land." This is the great foundation rock of American institutions, and, reverently adopting the language of Scripture, we may say, that "whosoever falls upon it shall be broken, but upon whomsoever it shall fall, it shall grind him to powder!"

Our City and County Ticket.

THE nomination of candidates for all the offices in the city and county, was completed yesterday by the selection of Mr. William Y Campbell for Register of Wills, and Joseph M Cowell for Sheriff. In the selection of these gentlemen the Convention has furnished us with as strong a ticket as we had any right to expect. Mr. Campbell is an earnest Republican, and has always borne the reputation of being an honest and courteous gentleman. We know that considerable disappointment is felt because of the defeat of General Prevost. He was pressed earnestly by gentlemen whose recommendation should not be passed unnoticed, and is certainly an excellent and worthy gentleman. But some one had to be defeated. and by going into the Convention the friends of each candidate agreed to submit their qualifications to the decision of that body. A majority, taking into consideration Mr. Cowell's high private character, and remembering the long and faithful services he has rendered the party, he having always been one of its most earnest and constant working members, saw fit to give him the coveted honor, and we are glad to see the friends of General Prevost have the graceful courtesy and good sense to make the selection manimous.

It has been several years since we have had a ticket without some weak spot in it. But The strength of the latter gentleman is other than our own nominations, and in the | in the ranks. We have succeeded in getting the contest, it matters not who may be nominated by the opposition, we will fear no comparison. It will not be a question of personal merit, for in that we are every way their equal. It will be an issue of principle. All who de not favor the doctrines of Woodward and Vallandigham will have no excuse for voting for any but our regularly-selected nominees.

The Way of the Transgressor. Tun fate meted out to Secretaries Seward and Welles will, we hope, be a perpetual warning to all the politicians of the land-a monument of what they may expect if they sacrifice principle to the temporary possession of office. From the highest rank in the country they have fallen to-day to be the tolerated hangerson of an Administration which is likely at any time to dismiss them from its membership, The lesson taught is so plainly written that he who runs can read. It speaks in language unmistakable, and tells us that a public man in America can only be successful so far as he sternly stands by his principles. The rise of statesmen in the United States, and their continuance in power, depend on other circumstances than obtain in Great Britain and Europe. The personal favoritism and the combined influences of family connections can make a man a leader in the Commons, and talent, however brilliant, without favoritism, can have but little hope of competing with the partiality of the aristocracy. The fate of Pitt and the success of Fox, the failure of Chatham and the continued influence of North, all show that principle and brains are not the only requisites to framing the councils of the British nation.

The whole history of American politics, however, is the reverse. As steadfast adherence to the King generally succeeded in England, so steadfast adherence to the doctrines first declared is the surest, the only way to permanently rise in America. Those of our statesmen who have succeeded in securing a niche in the Capitol and a higher place in history, have all adopted a theory intrinsically right, and by holding on to it have risen with the rise of their doctrines. The shifting and time-serving have almost invariably failed to reach the mark for which they aimed, and the prince of time-servers is William H.

We see no reason to doubt that the rumors in regard to his retirement from the Cabinet. although they are possibly premature, anticipate the intended action of the President. Mr. Johnson, with all his madness and all his folly, is not entirely a fool. He knows that his Cabinet should strengthen his Administration, and that each portfolio should be held by a representative of one class in the political world, whose interest it is useful to secure. Knowing this, we only wonder why he has retained Seward and Welles as long as he has. They represent no one. They have left their life-long companions, and stand alone. The corporal's guard which Adams said surrounded Tyler, is a host compared with their followers. They do not, within the United States, have sufficient followers to elect either of them to the lower house of a State legislature. Separated from all their disciples, they are only allowed to hold their portfolios through pity, and pity in the heart of Mr. Johnson is about as strong a feeling as gratitude or remembrance of past pledges. We do not think, therefore, that they will long head their respective departments. Democrats will succeed them, and they pass away into private life, with nothing but a record to remind all future statesmen of the fate in store for desertion of principle. Surely no better proof is needed of the hardness of the way of the transgressor. The only occupation left to Gov. Seward will be to hurl anathemas at Presidential ingratitude, and say with Wolsey:-

"Had I but served my party
With half the zeal that I have served my friend,
It would not, in mine old age,
Have left me naked to mine enemies."

The Success of Our Principles.

OVER two months ago an effort was started to secure the unanimous re-election of Judge Ludlow. It was headed by many gentlemen of the Republican party. It secured the assent of two of the Republican newspapers of Philadelphia. It was not opposed by any paper we read-no voice raised in opposition. At the same time, although assured by many for whose opinion we have high regard that any attempt to secure a Republican nomination would ignominiously fail, we felt that the crisis demanded that the conquerors in the war should not tamely submit to the election of any man, not if he was as pure as Gabriel himself, who had opposed the war and favored the policy of the Democracy while our nation was in danger. Beleiveing this, the EVENING TELEGRAPH, early in June, demanded that the party convention should meet, and that it should do its duty and put up a candidate.

Alone and single-handed we fought in favor of what we felt was the opinion of the masses of the party, and what we conscientiously believed to be our duty as public journalists. And despite all opposition, all murmurs, all assurances of failure, we have succeeded. The Convention met, and not a voice was raised in favor of adjournment. Not a man dared propose what was openly declared as certain two months ago, although there were parties in the body pledged to make the motion. A candidate was nominated amid great enthusiasm, and, with unanimity most surprising, the duties of the Convention were done. Now that success has crowned our efforts, we see some of our contemporaries, who favored no nomination, beginning to trim their sails. They do not like, they do not dare, to be placed in the attitude of opposing Thayer and favoring a ticket without some war and is this year we have only unexceptionable men. I melting away, and by the time of the election There is no possible excuse for voting any ill deserting Republicans will be once more a nomination, and now we will do all we can to get an election, which we deem as certain as the other. We are not given to selfcongratulation, but the complete success attending the plan favored by us alone, when other journals were advocating Ludlow, is ground for no small rejoicing.

The Progress of the Pacific Railroad. THE opening of the tunnel on the California side of the Pacific Railroad, through the summit of the Sierra Nevada, is announced. The most formidable and costly difficulties on the Pacific end of the route are now surmounted, and hereafter the constructors of the road have the prospect of a cheap and easy route. The track is already being laid on the eastern slope of the mountains, and Nevada will probably be reached during the present season.

From this side the road is also progressing rapidly, although the Indian difficulties have done much to embarrass and retard it. The Omaha line has already reached a distance of 550 miles, while the Kausas branch must be finished for nearly 300 miles. It is more than probable that the year 1870 will witness the cars running through from the Missouri river to the Pacific Ocean.

OLD CHURCHES IN NEW JERSEY .- The Dutch Reformed Church at Bergen Hill, about two miles back from Jersey City, claims to be the first church of any denomination established in New Jersey. The First Presbyterian Church at Elizabeth was organized in 1766. It was the first church in New Jersey where the services were held in the English language. The old First Presbyterian Church on Broad street, in Newark, was built in 1673, the congregation having being organized in 1667. The Baptist Church in Piscataquay, Middlesex county, was established in 1680. The Raritan Dutch Reformed Church, in Somerset county, near the junction of the North and South branches of the Raritan, was organized in 1780. Old Tenant Church near Freehold was esta blished in 1752. The Episcopal at Perth Amboy was established in 1698. The Presbyterians first had worship in Perth Amboy in 1731.

-A letter from Rome declares that the Pope has just made a serious encroachment on the prerogatives of the Patriarchs of the East, who have always appointed their suffragan bishops, with the cooperation of the clergy and the faithful. The Pope is said to have now obtained from the latter a renunciation of that privilege; in future a list of three candidates will be presented to his Holiness, who WEIGAND'S PATENT STEAM GENE. RATOR,-This is the most simple, safe, and economical apparatus known for making steam. It is less expensive, both in first cost and use, and its advantages are such that it must supersede every other boiler, IT CANNOT POSSIBLY BE EX-PLODED; will not incrust; can be increased to any capacity by the additions of section; can be separated into sections for convenient transportation; generates steam fast and dry; economizes in space, weight, and fuel; costs less for brick work and setting up; is less liable to get out of order, and can be anywhere repaired; and can be manufactured and sold thirty per cent less than any other boiler now in use. Engineers, machinists, and capitalists are invited to examine one of these Bollers now in operation at Henderson's Mill, Coates street, west of Twenty-first, A. Company to manufacture this Boller is being organ ized, and one thousand shares of stock in all ar offered for sale at $50 a share, of which two-thirds has been subscribed. It will be shown to those interested, that a large profit is already being realized in the manufacture.

A model of the Boiler can be seen at the office of SAMUEL WORK, Northeast cor. THIRD and DOCK Streets, where subscriptions for ishares in the Company will be received.
